

Helpful Resources

Here are some helpful resources that I have come across:

Print and Audio:

The Read-Aloud Handbook by Jim Trelease

This book discusses the importance of reading aloud to your children. It includes a large list of great books to read to your children.

Love and Logic

In the Millburn Central library, we are fortunate to have a large collection of Love and Logic books and CD's courtesy of a grant. As a parent, you may check out these books.

ADDitude Magazine

The target audience is parents/teachers of children with ADD/ADHD. This magazine is chock full of great ideas for parents of ANY child.

Websites:

www.millburn24.net

Under Technology, there are many kid friendly websites listed. These sites are helpful for practicing math facts, looking up a topic for a report that is due, typing practice, and many other fun sites.

www.internet4classrooms.com

I use this site frequently in the classroom for math practice.

www.additudemag.com

ADDitude Magazine's website

www.loveandlogic.com

The official site for Love and Logic. There are great articles with helpful hints for parents. You can look up when there may be a conference in this area. You can also order any materials you may be interested in purchasing.

www.ldonline.com

Helpful information about learning disabilities

Just fun sites!

<http://kids.discovery.com>

www.pbskids.org

www.scholastic.com

www.timeforkids.com

www.gigglepoetry.com